Overview:

Conquering to the top of Mt. Fansipan is always the most wanted expedition for adventure lovers to Vietnam. This route is based on a longer time in compare to the normal one. With the starting point in Tram Ton pass and return by Sin Chai route said to be the most beautiful but also most challenging. Reaching the summit after overcoming difficulties may not just give you the absolute victory feeling but you will be awarded with breathtaking natural scenes, spectacular beauty of clouds on Hoang Lien Mountains and the Sapa town in the distance.

Itinerary:

Day 1: Sa Pa - Fansipan at 2200 metres.

9am: meet you at your hotel in Sa Pa and drive to Silver Waterfall before reaching the highest mountain pass in Viet Nam - TramTon Pass at 1950 metres above sea level. Spend time enjoying the natural environment before starting the challenging trek to the peak. We walk through primitive rainforest and jungle. After 5 hour trekking, you will reach a height of 2200 metres where we will make tents, prepare dinner by ourselves and spend the first night on the mountain.

Day 2: Discover the summit 3143 metres

We have breakfast at the camp then we climb to the summit, passing towering Yellow Bamboo forests. After approximately 4 hours you will be standing on the highest peak in Viet Nam, Mt. Fansipan, known as 'the roof of Indochina'. Spend 1 hour at the summit to enjoy magnificent and inspiring views, to the northwest are small village areas and splendid rolling mountains belonging to Lai Chau province, to the northeast you will have a birds eye view of Sa Pa town which can only be seen from this vantage point. Have lunch and then descend to the camp at 2200 metres to enjoy dinner.

Day 3: Fansipan - Shin Chai – Sa Pa

After breakfast on the mountain, we will take a different route to the foot of the mountain. Here we will visit to understand the lifestyles and traditional customs of the Black H'mong people in the Sin Chai Village. You will have lunch along the way before driving back to Sa Pa.
